Bowden, pastor of Barton Heights Baptist Church, officiating. The bride and groom were unattended, and the ceremony took place in the parlor, which was arranged with palms, ferns and smilax with quantities of pink tulips and white roses everywhere. I Daniel Briggs, of this city, played the wedding music, and "O Beloved Me" very softly during the ceremony.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue cloth with a smart hat of the same shade and carried a shower bouquet of lilacs of the valley. Only the immediate families and a few intimate friends were present at the ceremony, which was celebrated very quietly, and Mr. and Mrs. Toombs left immediately for a Northern wedding trip. They will be at home later at 715 West Clay Street, in this city.

HOLLAND DEMOCRATIC MONARCHICAL STATE

Celebrated Through Centuries for Its Independence With Regard to Thrones.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

HOLLAND is perhaps the most democratic monarchical state in Europe, and has been celebrated through centuries for its independence with regard to thrones. Yet the States General, that is to say, the national legislature, in discussing the proposed amendments of the Constitution, have by an overwhelming vote insisted that all royal proclamations, which now begin "We, Wilhelm, King of the Netherlands," should in future run as follows: "We, Wilhelm, by the grace of God, King of the Netherlands," on the ground that since all human power emanates from God, it should not be lacking either from royal proclamations or from the provisions of the national Constitution.

Although no Sallé law prevails in the Netherlands, yet the sovereign power is vested by the constitution in a King, and that is why Wilhelm, in all Dutch official documents is referred to, not as "the Queen," but as "the King."

Another amendment of the Constitution accepted by the States General, and which is certain to pass, provides that in the event of the crown of the Netherlands passing to a foreign prince occupying another throne, he must renounce the latter within a period of ninety days, failing which he forfeits forever all his rights to the sovereignty of Holland.

The civil list of the monarch is increased by the terms of the amendment, from 600,000 to 800,000 florins, or less than $500,000. Queen Wilhelmine receives as much more from the crown domains. Fortunately, however, she is wholly independent of these revenues, since she enjoys one of the very largest private fortunes of any ruler in Europe, the foundations of which were laid by King William I, in the prosecution of vast enterprises, tending to raise the commerce of the Netherlands, both in Europe and in the Orient.

The sovereign, her daughter, and her son, who may give birth, and who would bear the title of Prince of Orange, are exempt by the amendments from all taxation, no matter of what kind. But neither the Queen Mother nor Queen Wilhelmine's consort, Prince Henry of the Netherlands, enjoys any such immunity.

Another amendment requires the consent not only of the sovereign, but also of the States General, for the marriage of any member of the Dutch royal family, and this amendment, without legislative consent is in fact invalid.

Finally, the amendments of the Constitution provide for a simplification of the methods of naturalization. At present the latter is a matter of considerable difficulty, requiring the enactment of a special bill in each case. For the future, a law is to be devised covering all applications for citizenship, which will be granted by the government without further reference to Parliament, if the provisions are complied with.

The first constitution after Holland's reconstruction as a kingdom was given in 1815, and amendments have been voted in 1848 and in 1890. One feature of the 1848 constitution, amendments which deserves attention is the expectation expressed therein of the birth of a male heir to the throne, who would necessarily supplant little Princess Juliana, now the Queen's only child, and who will celebrate on the 30th of this month her fourth birthday.

The new Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Right Hon. Ignatius O'Brien, has his office in the ground just outside the precincts of the mosque, and was dashed to death.

Realizing that all the gates and approaches of the mosque were closely watched, he contrived a huge pair of wings, composed of the feathers of ducks and geese. Fastening these to his shoulders and arms, he leaped out into the air from the summit of one of the minarets, expecting to be able in this way to fly far above the heads of those who were seeking his life, until he had reached some point in the neighboring mountains, where he would be safe from pursuit.

Unfortunately, his movements were impeded by some carpenter's wind, which had become entangled in the folds of his garments, and which prevented him from moving one of his wings in such a manner as to sustain him in the air, and the consequence was that he fell to the ground just outside the precincts of the mosque, and was dashed to death.

High Court of Justice at Dublin. But once Erin recovers home rule, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland will be called upon once more to preside over the deliberations of the Irish House of Lords, just in the same way that the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain presides over the sessions of the House of Lords at Westminster.

Sometimes the Lord High Chancellor of Ireland is a member of the cabinet, but more often not. In the latter matter depends largely upon political exigencies, and the importance of the personage entrusted with the care of the Great Seal of the Kingdom of Ireland. The first Lord Chancellor of Ireland was Stephen Ridel, who was appointed in 1187, and the office has been in existence ever since, that is to say, for over 700 years.

In the obituaries of Lord Wolseley in the English papers, I find a story ascribed to him which of right refers to the late General Lord Dornier. It intimates that Lord Wolseley during his expedition up the Nile for the relief of General Gordon at Khartoum, in endeavoring to extract information from a captured Arab, declared in Arabic that he, Wolseley, was a widower, in token of which he drew out his glass eye, threw it up in the air, and put it back in its socket.

Now, although Wolseley was a glass eye, he was unable to speak a single word of Arabic. On the other hand, Lord Dornier, who spent a number of years in Egypt in various military capacities, including that of commander-in-chief, was a master of the native language. It was he, and not Wolseley, who convinced the natives of his supernatural powers by means of legerdemain with his glass eye. This glass eye of his used to get so hot while he was on the upper reaches of the Nile, where the temperature was almost intolerable, that he was wont to have a spare glass eye always by his side, cooling in a cup of water, in order to take the place of the other, when its heat had become unbearable.

Lord Dornier was afterwards appointed to the command of the British military forces in the presidency of Madras, where he was killed by a huge tiger, which this gallant old soldier, despite his age and his glass eye, had attempted to stalk on foot in the jungle; a feat which was really courting death.

The capture of Adrianople, and the marvelous preservation throughout all the siege of the magnificent sixteenth century Mosque of Sultan Selim, with its four exquisite minarets, each of them 200 feet high, serves to recall the fact that its architect, a Bulgarian, Shihab by name, who likewise designed the Shahzadeh or Prince's Mosque at Constantinople, was among the earliest aviators. Having learned that Sultan Selim had determined to put him to death as soon as he had completed the great mosque at Adrianople, to prevent his building anything finer elsewhere, he devoted all his ingenuity towards effecting his escape.

Realizing that all the gates and approaches of the mosque were closely watched, he contrived a huge pair of wings, composed of the feathers of ducks and geese. Fastening these to his shoulders and arms, he leaped out into the air from the summit of one of the minarets, expecting to be able in this way to fly far above the heads of those who were seeking his life, until he had reached some point in the neighboring mountains, where he would be safe from pursuit.

Unfortunately, his movements were impeded by some carpenter's wind, which had become entangled in the folds of his garments, and which prevented him from moving one of his wings in such a manner as to sustain him in the air, and the consequence was that he fell to the ground just outside the precincts of the mosque, and was dashed to death.

SMITH APPEARED IN BIRMINGHAM

President of State Trust Company Held for North Carolina Authorities.

TARVER MAY BE IN AUGUSTA
Cashier of Closed Bank of Claremont May Turn State's Evidence.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Raleigh, N. C., April 11.—President E. H. Smith, of the State Trust Company, Wilmington, was arrested this afternoon in Birmingham, Ala., according to official information received by the Corporation Commission and Attorney-General T. W. Bickett, and a requisition was forthwith issued by Governor Craig on the Governor of Alabama for the extradition of Smith.

Attorney-General T. W. Bickett received from Chief of Police George H. Bodeker, of Birmingham, a telegram reading: "E. H. Smith is in custody; send warrant quick; habeas corpus proceedings threatened. Tarver is in Augusta, Ga.; arrived there last night. Work quick."

The Attorney-General immediately telegraphed the Alabama authorities to hold Smith by all means, and that the requisition papers would start in the hands of an officer on the first train to bring Smith back to North Carolina. Also, he telegraphed the authorities at Augusta to arrest Vice-President W. O. Tarver there.

Travis and Secretary Maxwell, of the Corporation Commission, got busy with the Attorney-General and prepared the requisition papers so that Officer J. A. Bodeker, of Birmingham, could bring Smith back to North Carolina. They are very much in hopes that the officers at Augusta will also get hold of Tarver there to-night.

Secretary-Treasurer C. H. Bowlds, of the State Trust Company, is already in jail here, as also is Cashier Demit Lafoon, of Claremont, who is being held with making false statements to the Corporation Commission and making false entries on books of banks at Claremont, Angier and Macesfield.

Cashier Demit Lafoon, of the Bank of Claremont, was brought here and committed to the city prison to await trial on the warrant of State Bank Examiner S. A. Hubbard, charging him with implication in the banking frauds perpetrated by the States Trust Company, Wilmington, whose banks at Claremont, Angier and Macesfield were closed by the Corporation Commission during the past few days. He insists that he has no criminal connection with the operations of the States Trust Company, was employed at a salary by the States Trust Company to serve as cashier of the Claremont Bank. He says he had been connected with the scheme in any criminal way he could easily have skipped out, as President Smith, Vice-President Tarver and the other officers of the company did. He was taken up to the office of Attorney-General Bickett this morning for a conference with the Attorney-General, members of the Corporation Commission and the State Bank examiners. While no official statement to this effect has been made, it is probable that Lafoon will turn State's evidence, and that the officers of the States Trust Company, in the hope of demonstrating his freedom from criminal intent in the service he rendered as cashier of Claremont Bank.

The Corporation Commission had a letter to-day from the business men of Englehard, asking about the States Trust Company and stating that they had been induced to subscribe $6,000 stock in a local bank, as they thought, but which they now find to be the States Trust Company. Cash and notes had been paid for this stock, and if the company was not all right they wanted to know what steps to take to recover money and notes. They had been assured that the town would be provided with a bank of $10,000 capital and that the States Trust Company should control it. There is no consolation in the prospect of recovery of money that the Corporation Commission could offer the Englehard citizens. There were probably twenty banks in the State that were being worked in this way, the commissioners find.

A special hearing has been arranged for in the offices of the Corporation Commission, in Raleigh, on April 22, to close the Rockingham and Seaboard Line Railroad case, involving the petition of citizens to require physical connection between the Seaboard and the Rockingham Railroads for the interchange of freight cars. The petitioners not having completed the hearing at Rockingham yesterday.

A charter has been issued for the Corporation Commission, of Hendersonville, capital $100,000 authorized and $7,000 subscribed, by S. S. Crittenden, P. F. Patton and W. A. Smith, for general real estate and development business.

Governor Craig has gone to Charlotte for a conference of the legislative commissioners on freight rate adjustment and the Charlotte shippers, preparatory to the general conference of shippers with the railroad companies for the first definite move as to adjustment since the Legislature adjourned.

A requisition was issued to-day by Governor Craig on the Governor of Tennessee for John Emitt Gilley, who is wanted in Surry County for the abandonment of an afflicted child, which he is under charge to support. He is under arrest in Bristol, awaiting the arrival of the North Carolina officers.

Colonel Thomas Stringfield, of Wayneville, inspector of small arms, and Captain A. Green, Jr., of the United States Army, were here to-day on their way to Newbern to inspect the coast artillery there to-morrow. They will inspect Wilmington Company, coast artillery, and the 1st North Carolina Troop, a cavalry, Lincoln, on April 16, and Troop B, Asheville, April 18. This will conclude the inspections for the year. Companies of the guard have been found to be well up to the average. However, there are prospects of one or more disbandments when the returns are all in.

Buya Williamsburg Property.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Williamsburg, Va., April 11.—Miss Marie Marshall, of New York, who owns a handsome home here, has purchased the property, immediately opposite her place on West Franklin Street. The purchase includes the houses and lots belonging to Mrs. C. L. Bass, William Allen Jones and Henry Phillips. The price paid for the property aggregated $7,800. It is understood that Miss Marshall's property was intended to buy all the property facing her block, lying between Henry and Franklin Streets, and to be sold by the holdings. The assessed value of the property involved in the deal was only $2,400, being less than half that paid for it by Miss Marshall.

BILLS AMENDING ANTITRUST LAW

Several Such Measures Now in Contemplation by Congressmen.

Washington, April 11.—Antitrust legislation is to engage the attention of the Democratic Congress early in the regular session, if not during the extra session, which is now wrestling with the tariff bill.

Several bills amending the Sherman law are in contemplation, and one, already introduced by Representative Raker, of California, has been referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The Raker bill would specifically define the law and public policy of the government with respect to combinations. Combinations in restraint of trade would be defined as all arrangements, without exception, limitation of qualification, between two or more persons to compete in trade, or which create the dangerous probability "that the national trade shall be decreased for private profit."

Funds for Nurses' Home.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Harrisonburg, Va., April 11.—A movement has been started here by the board of trustees to raise $10,000 to build a nurses' home on the grounds of the Rockingham Memorial Hospital. Committees are trying to get 1,000 subscribers at $10 each. Opening last October, the hospital has had 123 patients, with only six deaths.
